

UNIVERSITY OF
MICHIGAN PRESS

A COMMENTARY ON PLAUTUS' CURCULIO

By T. H. M. Gellar-Goad
Michigan Classical Commentaries Series

Lively and critically aware, T.H.M. Gellar-Goad's A Commentary on Plautus' Curculio is the leading, up-to-date text on the Latin comedy. The play, popularly known as The Weevil, follows a young man who falls in love with an enslaved girl and attempts to buy her freedom, with a cast of kooky sailors, prostitutes, and plenty of plot twists. As Plautus's shortest comedy, Curculio has proven to be a desirable text for university performances and exemplifies Plautus' iconic style of Roman comedic archetypes, a blend of erotics, deception, and recognition plotlines. Gellar-Goad's commentary is the complete package, with introductions to themes, content, humor, meter, and syntax; notes on matters of performance, interpretation, and social history; and text clarifying stage directions.

This up-to-date, authoritative commentary on the play will prove useful to directors and actors of such productions and will readily introduce students to the joys of Roman comedy.

T. H. M. Gellar-Goad is an author and Associate Professor of Classics at Wake Forest University.

DOI: 0.3998/mpub.12411836

6 x 9 | 232 pages | 1 table, 4 images

Hardcover | 2024 | $75.00 U.S.
ISBN 9780472077069

Paper | 2024 | $29.95 U.S.
ISBN 9780472057061

ORDER ONLINE AND SAVE 30%
WITH DISCOUNT CODE UMF24!